Biographical Sketch:

David Shaffer, F.R.C.P., F.R.C.Psych., is the Irving Philips Professor of Child Psychiatry (and Professor of Psychiatry and Pediatrics) and chairman of the Division of Child Psychiatry at Columbia University and New York State Psychiatric Institute.

Dr. Shaffer obtained his training in medicine (University College Hospital), in pediatrics (Hospital for Sick Children), and in psychiatry and child psychiatry (Maudsley Hospital) in London.

He has had a longstanding interest in classification and worked on ICD-9 , DSM-III, and DSM-III-R and co-chaired the child disorder group for DSM-IV. His research has covered the epidemiology and clinical characteristics of child and adolescent psychiatric disorders generally and adolescent suicide in particular. In recognition of this work, he has received awards from a number of foundations and associations.

Other research interests include the development of computerized diagnostic instruments (the NIMH DISC) closely linked to DSM criteria and an amalgam of findings using these instruments.
