Profession of Psychiatry, Stanford Medical School and Palo Alto Veterans Administration

Palo Alto Health Care System

Palo Alto, CA

Trisha Suppes, M.D., Ph.D. is a Professor of Psychiatry at Stanford Medical School and the Palo Alto VA in Palo Alto, California. Before moving to California in June 2008, Dr. Suppes was the Director of the Bipolar Disorders Research Program at UT Southwestern Medical Center at Dallas. Her areas of expertise and research include long-term treatment algorithms, and treatment of bipolar depression. Dr. Suppes' research on lithium discontinuation in the early 1990s helped change the way psychiatrists approach the treatment of bipolar disorders. She currently serves as an associate editor on the American Journal of Psychiatry Editorial Board and is on the Board of Councilors for the International Society for Bipolar Disorders, as well as being a member of the APA Work Group for the Practice Guidelines for Bipolar Disorder. She is a member of the Scientific Advisory Board of the Depression and Bipolar Alliance, the International Society for the Affective Disorders, the American College of Neuropsychopharmacology, and the Society of Biological Psychiatry's Program Planning Committee. She has also authored or co-authored over 170 peer-reviewed articles.

Dr. Suppes earned her BA in human biology at Stanford University in Stanford, California, her Ph.D. in anatomy/physiology at the University of California at Los Angeles, and her M.D. at Dartmouth Medical School in Hanover, New Hampshire. After graduating, she completed her residency in adult psychiatry at McLean Hospital in Belmont, Massachusetts. Her postdoctoral fellowship in neurology was conducted at Stanford University School of Medicine, and her clinical fellowship in psychiatry was conducted at McLean Hospital at the Harvard Medical School in Boston, Massachusetts. She also completed a fellowship in neuroscience at Harvard Medical School.
