Biographical Sketch:

Arthur J. Barsky, M.D.

Doctor Barsky is a Professor of Psychiatry at Harvard Medical School and the Director of Psychiatric Research in the Department of Psychiatry at the Brigham and Women's Hospital in Boston, Massachusetts. He graduated from Williams College and the Columbia University College of Physicians and Surgeons. He interned at the Beth Israel Medical Center in New York City and completed a residency in psychiatry at the Massachusetts General Hospital in Boston, where he remained on the full-time faculty until 1993 when he moved to the Brigham and Women's Hospital. His major interests are hypochondriasis and somatization, the psychological factors that affect symptom reporting in the medically ill, and the cognitive and behavioral treatment of somatic symptoms. Doctor Barsky has been the principal investigator of nine NIMH and NIH research grants in these areas. He has authored 135 articles, 18 book chapters, and the popular books Worried Sick: Our Troubled Quest for Wellness, and Stop Being Your Symptoms and Start Being Yourself. Dr. Barsky received the President's Research Award from the American Psychosomatic Society. He has been a Faculty Fellow of the Mind/Brain/Behavior Interfaculty Initiative of Harvard University, and chaired one of its interdisciplinary work groups on the experience of illness. Dr. Barsky is currently a member of the work group to revise DSM V. He has been a Visiting Professor at the Georgetown University School of Medicine, the University of Wisconsin Medical School, the University of Illinois College of Medicine, Dartmouth Medical School, and the Allegheny University of the Health Sciences. He is a Distinguished Life Fellow of the American Psychiatric Association, a Fellow of the American College of Psychiatrists, and served on the Council of the American Psychosomatic Society.
